As a young girl, Selena Elizondo was awed by the powerful voices of mariachi singers. "Even though I couldn't understand everything, I could feel the passion," said Elizondo, 18, who started taking singing lessons at age 9 after seeing a mariachi performance at her school. "It would be mesmerized by their performing."

Now, Elizondo hopes to be the one leaving audiences wowed. On Saturday, Dec. 2, Elizondo will compete against dozens of other mariachi students from across the state for the title of "Best Mariachi Vocalist in the U.S." in Ford Motor Company's 15th Annual Mariachi Vargas Extravaganza. It's a title that Elizondo, a senior at Madison High School, tied for last year and has competed for since 1999. Top student vocalists in elementary school to college-age categories compete for the best vocalist title. The winner opens for the world-renowned Mariachi Vargas de Tecali-tlan on Dec. 2.

Other cities have similar competitions, but the San Antonio contest is the biggest of its kind and the only one judged by members of Mariachi Vargas, said Laura Cardenas, spokesperson for the event, which draws hundreds of students for its competitions and music workshops. "It's done on a much grander scale here," she said. "It's a big spectacle." Elizondo said mariachi music is her favorite music to perform because of its soulfulness and range. "It talks about problems most people have," she said. "I like it". Elizondo, who also sings pop and chorale in her school choir. Elizondo would like to finish her amateur singing career with the best-vocalist title if she doesn't earn the title this year. Elizondo said, she'll compete again next year in the college category. "I'm not nervous. I'm actually really excited," she said. "I'm looking forward to getting up on stage and really letting it out."

Elizondo, who plans to major in education and music at Texas State University, said she'll continue taking mariachi lessons and performing with local mariachi groups after high school. "I can't imagine not performing," she said. "It's part of me." mvecinanzae@conexiones.com

Making of the mariachi

Known as the music of Mexico, mariachi songs date back to the 18th century. Here's a look at mariachi music's connection to other musical genres.

Sombrero, the original cowboy hat. Made of straw or felt and with a wide brim, sombreros were modified into a smaller, narrower headgear worn by cowboys on the range and stage.

Mariachi groups can number up to 20 members who play violins, trumpets, guitars and the signature guitar. Such large ensembles using a variety of string and horn instruments were popular in the "70s disco and R&B scene. Remember KC & The Sunshine Band and Earth, Wind & Fire?" Whether they know it or not, many musicians have been influenced by mariachi music. A trumpet riff in the Johnny Cash (right) classic "Ring of Fire" is reminiscent of mariachi trumpet solos, and Linda Ronstadt belted out rock tunes years before she released her 1987 mariachi album, "Canciones de Mi Padre."

Like The Beach Boys and The Temptations (left) in the '60s, mariachi-amour dress in matching outfits for a uniform look. But mariachis have more flash with their elaborately ornamented waist-length jackets and tie-like fringes.

Music festival boasts the very best

Thousands of area and regional students are busy tuning up for competition in the 12th annual Mariachi Vargas Extravaganza that unfolded this week.

Once again, the world-renowned Mariachi Vargas de Tecalihtlan headlines the main event on Saturday, Dec. 2, at the Municipal Auditorium. Tickets are available through Ticketmaster.

Another highlight takes place in the Sesena by el Rio Thursday, Nov. 30, as a few dozen student mariachi groups serenade tourists along the River Walk.

Because of their long and storied past, impeccable musicianship and international influence, Mariachi Vargas retains its standing as the world’s best mariachi. Part of that heritage is Ruben Puentes, long considered one of the world’s foremost authorities on mariachi and rancheras music.

Puentes has worked as a musician, producer, arranger and music director with Mariachi Vargas since 1944.

In October, Puentes was recognized for a lifetime of significant contributions during ceremonies at the prestigious Palacio de Bellas Artes in Mexico City. Puentes, 82, was instrumental in developing what became known as the professional, or symphonic, mariachi style and led the way in helping mariachi become known internationally as the heartland music of Mexico.

To Cynthia Munoz, promoter of the annual extravaganza, Puentes is a pillar: "Maestro Ruben Puentes is the backbone for what mariachi music is known for today. His contributions to the mariachi music industry have impacted music in general around the world."

Meanwhile, Mariachi Vargas is touring behind a brand new CD, "Para Nuestros Amigos," a 17-track album.

Highlights include "Las Isabeles," "Mi Linda Chaparrita," and "Hermoso Garifio." The CD also includes "Popurri Jose Alfredo Jimenez" which includes the songs "Tu Recuerdo y Yo," "Yo," "Las Ciudadas," "Cuando Sale la Luna," "Cuando Vivas Conmigo," "Decidirme Inocente," "Que sea Me Acabe la Vida," and "Canta Canta."

Mariachi Vargas also reworks Ramon Ayala's norteño nugget "Un Rinconcito en el Cielo" into a lively ranchera.

Mariachi Vargas vocalists and violinists Steven Sandoval and Fernando Martinez also make their arrangement debut with the song, respectively, "Mi Linda Chaparrita" and "Despues de Tanto Tiempo."

Dec. 2's concert caps a weeklong schedule of activities that kicked last week with a mariachi Mass at San Jose Mission. A series of community and in-school mariachi presentations also were held.

Normally a three-day affair with workshops, seminars and the gala concert, the festival was expanded to eight days for the second year in a row. The expansion is modeled after the annual Mariachi Encuentro Internacional in Guadalajara, Mexico, where mariachi groups are encouraged to perform in public venues.

The growth reflects mariachi music's growing popularity in the United States. Since the 1990s, there has been an increase in mariachi classes in high schools and universities.

Major mariachi conferences have been on the rise, particularly in the Southwest.
